Wind Patterns Over Lower Lake Mead United States. Hydrologic Services Division,1953 It is not the purpose of this report to describe the use of wind observations in the evaporation studies. Rather, the prime objective is publication of the data in a form suitable for microclimatological research.

Three-dimensional Wind Flow and Resulting Precipitation in a Northern California Storm United States. Weather Bureau,Vance A. Myers,George A. Lott,1963 By careful consideration of the observed winds and with the aid of various empirical and dynamics relationships, a steady-state 3-dimensional wind flow is deduced over northern California for a 24-hour stormy period. The production (or evaporation) of precipitation elements is estimated for all parts of the flow, the surviving elements are followed down to the surface, and the resulting precipitation with the observed.

Strong Wind and Vertical Wind Shear Above 30 Km Arthur J. Kantor,1969 Strong wind and vertical wind shear must be considered for design and operation of vehicles that will either operate in or penetrate the upper stratosphere and mesosphere. Global extremes of these atmosphere parameters are estimated in this report for altitudes above 30 km. For the Northern Hemisphere estimated 90, 95, and 99% winds, related to the windiest months and locations, are provided for altitudes between 30 and 80 km. Speed increases up to about 55 km and appears to decrease thereafter up to at least 75 or 80 km in November, December, and January. The 99% winds can be expected to approach 215 mps near 55 km at certain locations between latitudes 35 and 60N. For the Southern Hemisphere 90, 95, and 99% winds are provided for altitudes between 30 and 60 km. The 99% winds reach roughly 200 mps near 55 km. Since estimates for the Southern Hemisphere are not necessarily representative of either the windiest month or location, results are uncertain and speeds probably will be somewhat larger than indicated. For the same percentiles, 1-km thick vertical wind shears have been estimated for altitudes between 30 and 70 km. Shears generally increase, and maximum values tend to move equatorward with altitude. (Author).

Observed Mean Monthly Winds at Standard Pressure Surfaces from 850 Mb to 100 Mb Arthur J. Kantor, 1976

This paper contains tables of mean monthly east-west and north-south wind components for January, April, July, and October at 200 Northern Hemisphere locations.

Vertical Profiles of Wind Speeds from Measurements of High Towers M. M. Borisenko, M. V. Zavarina, 1968 The paper considers profiles of wind velocities in the boundary layer computed from measurements of high towers in West Germany, England, Australia, the United States (Cedar Hill, Texas), Japan, and the USSR.

Dropsonde Wind Measurements Using Omega/Loran Tracking James F. Morrissey, Bernard D. Weiss, 1975 In April 1974, a series of aircraft tests was performed to evaluate the usefulness of retransmitted navigational aid signals (NAVAIDS) for measuring winds beneath flight level. Specifically, the OMEGA and LORAN signals were the NAVAID signals investigated. The use of LORAN signals was found to provide better than 1 mps accuracy when 2 min of data were used in the computation. For the OMEGA signals, the accuracy was found to be 1-1/2 mps for a 3-min data interval. In these tests, the 2- and 3-min intervals represent approximately 2000 and 3000 ft intervals of altitude due to motion of sounding instrument.
